14th Sunday of Ordinary Time; July 7th, 2024

Today Galilea's villagers acknowledge Jesus but, they don't –really– know Him... they do not really accept that he can be the Messiah. So many years living close to Him and... Even when nobody had told them that Jesus –born of Mary– was come from Heaven, they could perhaps have suspected it from the signs he did in front of them! Without Faith it is not possible to really recognize Jesus. Without Faith we cannot even see the miracles!

Pope Francis to take usual July pause from activities

Pope Francis will take his usual break in July from his weekly General Audience and most activities, with the exception of the Sunday Angelus prayer in St. Peter's Square. Pope Francis. According to the Prefecture of the Papal Household in a statement released on Friday June 22nd. As he has for years, the Holy Father will suspend most activities and other meetings, during July to allow for a period of rest. However, as he has always done in the past, the Pope will continue to pray the Angelus on Sunday at noon with the faithful in St. Peter's Square. The Pope's General Audiences will resume on Wednesday, August 7. The General Audiences in August are often held in the Vatican's Paul VI Hall due to the intense Roman heat. The following month, the Holy Father is scheduled to make two Apostolic Journeys, the first being to Asia and Oceania, on September 2-13, and the next being later in the month, to Belgium and Luxembourg, on September 26-29.

Funeral Mass

On Friday July 5th, there was a Funeral Mass for the repose of the soul of Geraldine Browne. May she rest in peace and our sincere condolences to his family and friends.

Reflection for this Sunday's Gospel

“He was amazed at their lack of faith”

Fr. Joaquim PETIT Llimona, L.C.(Barcelona, Spain)

Today the liturgy helps us discover the sentiments of the Heart of Jesus: “He was amazed at their lack of faith” (Mk 6:6). Without a doubt, the disciples must have been impressed by the lack of faith of the Master's fellow citizens and his reaction. It seemed only natural that things would have occurred differently: They came to the land where he had lived for so many years, they had heard about the works he was doing, and the logical consequence was that they would welcome him with affection and trust, more willing than others to listen to his teachings. However, it was not so, but quite the opposite: “And they took offense at him” (Mk 6:3).

The amazement of Jesus at the attitude of his people shows us a heart that trusts in people, that expects a response and is not indifferent to the lack of it, because it is a heart that gives itself seeking our good. St. Bernard expresses it very well when he writes: “The Son of God came and did such wonders in the world that he uprooted our understanding of all that is mundane, so that we might meditate and never cease to ponder his wonders. He left us infinite horizons for the ease of the intelligence, and an overflowing river of ideas impossible to wade through. Is there anyone capable of understanding why the Supreme Majesty would want to die to give us life, why He would want to serve so that we could reign, live without a place to rest his head so that we can possess the world, and allow himself to be lowered to the most vile and vulgar to exalt us above all else?”

One could think of how the lives of the Nazarenes would have changed if they had approached Jesus with faith. Thus, we must ask him daily as his disciples: “Lord, increase our faith” (Lk 17:5), so that we open ourselves more and more to let His love work in us.
